CANADIAN JEWISH REVIEW

Vol. VI. TORONTO, ONT., AUGUST 14, 1925 No. 42

Editorials

Shalom Aleichem

It is on the eve of my departure from the United States for Canada, to assume my duties as rabbi of the Holy Blossom Congregation, that I pen these words. I am happy to say through these columns, "Shalom aleichem" to Canadian Jewry and to Canada. I look forward with the highest anticipations to the new adventure that now beckons me. I welcome the opportunity of affiliating with the CANADIAN JEWISH REVIEW. The field of a rabbi's activities is not limited to the walls of his own synagogue. If worthy of the title he bears, he belongs to all Jewry, as well as to the larger community in which he ministers. Through this periodical as a medium, I shall be able to reach out beyond the boundaries of Holy Blossom and of Toronto to the scattered Jewries of Canada, to establish my contacts with them, and to join with them in promoting the challenging work of Judaism. I shall be the spokesman neither of reform, nor conservative, nor orthodox Judaism. I am a hyphenless Jew, to whose soul nothing Jewish is alien. Every Jewish cause worthy of the name shall enlist me in its ranks. I come to you when the problems confronting the Jew increase daily in complexity, and the tasks that face him seem almost beyond human accomplishment. But I have no fears for the future. The problems will be solved, and the tasks will be completed. A Jewish renaissance will be inaugurated, and I hope that in Canada I may help to usher in that renaissance. As a fellow-worker in the ranks of Judaism, I greet you all with the historic "Shalom aleichem."

FERDINAND M. ISSERMAN.

WITH THE OTHER ENGLISH-JEWISH PAPERS

Several months ago we read a book called "Quand Israel Est Roi," written by two Frenchmen, brothers, named Tharaud. It was one of the most maliciously prejudiced anti-Jewish books that had come under our notice in many years. It dealt with the Jewish "invasion" of Hungary from the day the first Jews came to that country until after the war. It was so patently a piece of anti-Jewish propaganda that we were surprised that an American publishing house would lend itself to the production of such a book. We had occasion within recent weeks to discuss this book with a man who has played an important part in Hungarian politics and who is intimate with the leading characters in the public life of that country, whether it be Karolyi, Bela Kun or Horthy. In his judgment this book of the Brothers Tharaud was a piece of PAID PROPAGANDA.

Now we invite attention to an extraordinary review of the book appearing in the August issue of the "Forum," a magazine of standing and of substance. The review is signed by "R. T." We are astonished that a publication such as the "Forum" would permit a "Reviewer" to make use of the magazine to further the mean purposes of a crowd of Jew-baiters. No one denies for a moment that there were Jews mixed up in the various political movements in Hungary; we don't deny that there were rascals among them just as there are rascals among the non-Jews, but to suggest that the Jews are responsible for all the evil happenings in Hungary is an insult to one's intelligence. Read what this reviewer has to say. He starts off with a prejudiced mind at the very outset:

"On reaching Buda Pesth last year a friend in the British Legation told me to buy a book by the Brothers Tharaud, called 'Quand Israel Est Roi.' He told me that I would find in it the true story of what happened to Hungary in the last twenty years, and particularly the incidents leading up to that one hundred days' nightmare when Bela Kun and his crowd of rascally Jews held Hungary in complete slavery. All those interested in Central Europe, in the psychology of the Jews and in the Third Internationale, should read it. It is well worth while. Probably no country in Europe has suffered so greatly during the last six years as has Hungary. After supplying the Empire with its bravest soldiers and sailors it found itself at the conclusion of the armistice cut off from Austria under the leadership of the indomitable Count Tisza. But during the twenty years preceding the war the Jews had been at work subjugating the country. By means of lending money to the land-owners, by occupying all the banking and financial positions, they had gradually got complete control of the country. The example of Russia and a helping hand held out from Moscow, coupled with the sudden decay of a great empire, was a signal to the Jew that his rule of Central Europe was in sight. The murder of Tisza, the puppet ministry of Count Karolyi, were all part of a comprehensive scheme that resulted in the coming of Bela Kun and his government of plunder, murder and brigandage.

"The world knows what has happened since then, how the country was freed by Roumania, whose rule proved almost as brutal as that of Bela Kun; how trainloads containing everything of value in Hungary were shipped to Roumania. Out of this welter of blood and disaster emerged a shorn and defeated Hungary, who had a still greater humiliation to face in having over half its territory taken from it and parceled amongst its victorious enemies.

"The Brothers Tharaud are Frenchmen who have lived long in Hungary and know that country as she really is. They have intense sympathy for what has passed, a sympathy shared by all who know her well. But above all they have studied as probably no other people in France, the psychology of that extraordinary race, the Jew."

We call upon the editor of the "Forum" to query "R.T." as to how much he actually knows of the Brothers Tharaud. Were they paid to write the book in question? Are they lending the skill of their pens to further the political ambitions of the Horthy group? Why should he merely upon the statement of a "friend" endorse the statements made in the book which reflect unworthily upon the Jews as a people? We are very much interested to learn "R. T." has so enthusiastically approved of the sentiments entertained by the Horthy regime as expressed through these two Frenchmen. We will appreciate an answer.—Pittsburg Jewish Citizen.

In Montreal Mr. Gerdy was an active member of the Bnai Brith, the first secretary of the Business Men's Council, and one of the founders of the Scopus Society. MAJOR SALMON WINS LIBEL SUIT

An interesting suit of libel and slander was heard recently by the Lord Chief Justice of England and a special jury, in which Major Isidore Salmon, M.P., recently elected treasurer of the United Synagogue, was the plaintiff and General Cyril Prescott Decies, President of the Loyalty League, a reactionary organization in England, was the defendant. General Decies, at a meeting of the league, made the assertion that the firm of J. Lyons & Co., the largest catering company of England, of which Major Salmon is the head, made a tremendous profit when the tax on tea was reduced, when they unloaded all the tea at the full price to retailers who had to sell it at a loss. In the course of the trial, the general's well-known anti-Semitic proclivities were made prominent, although the defense avoided calling General Decies to the witness stand. In summing up the case, the Lord Chief Justice said that in the court there should be only one maxim: "Be just and fair without respect to persons." They were not called upon to adjudicate upon the merits or demerits of the Jewish race, or upon the superlative excellence of the Loyalty League. The jury had not seen General Decies in the witness-box, but he had sent his sister there. By their verdict the jury might be inclined to express the view they took of that particular kind of weapon used by the defendant being introduced into a public controversy under a high-sounding name. The jury awarded Messrs. Lyons & Co. damages amounting to $3,000 and counsel for the plaintiff said that the sum would be given to charity.

JEWISH TEMPLE FOR COLLEGE STUDENTS

The first college Jewish temple in the United States is to be located at Ithaca, where 700 students of Cornell University have enlisted the help of Daniel Rothschild, well-known philanthropist of Ithaca, Charles Polakoff, of Buffalo, and other leading Jews. A committee has been formed, with Mr. Polakoff as chairman, to raise sufficient funds for this purpose.

"The great nation-wide movement for the revival of Judaism must fail if our college boys and girls are not spiritually strengthened at the most critical period of their lives," said Mr. Polakoff, "and with this in view, a call is being sent to leading Jews throughout the country and especially in the State of New York who are splendidly responding.

"We plan to build a Jewish house of worship for the Cornell students which will compare favourably with any other building in that great institution of learning. Practically every Christian denomination has its church at Cornell, and it is deplorable that the Jews are not represented. A temple where students of all denominations may attend will be our aim, and ample provision will be made for their social as well as religious needs."

Campaign headquarters have been opened in Ithaca, and the work of organization is going rapidly forward. Many men of national prominence from New York City are deeply interested in this project.

THE JEWS IN TRIPOLI

S. Hagiag, the president of the Jewish community in Tripoli, who was recently in Rome as the representative of the Jews of the Italian colony to bring greetings to the King of Italy on the occasion of his twenty-fifth jubilee, said in an interview about the condition of the Jews in Tripoli that they had nothing to complain regarding the treatment accorded to them by Italian officials. Some Jews have been given positions in the government and there are quite a number of Jews who are economically well-fixed and influential. The city of Tripoli has a Jewish population of about 17,000, but there are Jewish settlements in almost every other town of the province. Benghasi has a Jewish population of about 3,000. The upbuilding of Palestine has caught the imagination of many of the Tripolitan Jews, who are contributing their share to the various funds raised for that purpose. Recently a number of Halutzim left in a group with the intention of settling in Palestine.

THE POLISH-JEWISH AGREEMENT

In the course of the last few weeks an event of tremendous importance took place in Poland, which is unprecedented in the annals of Jewish history. We alluded to the negotiations between the Polish Government and the Jewish deputies in the Seim, who acted in behalf of the three and a half million Jews of Poland, in previous issues. Now, the negotiations have come to a close and a formal agreement was reached, which was made public by the Polish Government in an open and festive manner.

As Dr. Thon, one of the most important agents in these negotiations, said in a recent article, the importance of the event does not lie in the number of the concrete concessions obtained, but in the spirit in which the matter was treated by the Polish authorities and in the attitude assumed by them in conscientiously seeking means of establishing an understanding between the Jewish and Polish population. The Polish constitution is one of the most liberal constitutions in the world and there is nothing in it that denied anything to the Jews. It was the bitter anti-Semitic feeling that was ingrained in the mind of the Poles which made them defy the constitution and kept the Jews in a constant state of fear of legal violence and often also of physical violence. There was a kind of impenetrable wall between the Poles and the Jews and there was no way of coming to an understanding. The present negotiations came through the initiative of the Polish Government, which is apparently led by a more enlightened and liberal-minded class of people, and although it is not expected that this agreement will break that wall in a magic manner, it is hoped that it will help considerably in bringing these elements into a more friendly relationship. In fact, the fear was entertained that the Polish people as a whole would not subscribe to this agreement, and it was for this reason that the matter was not ratified by the Seim, the constituted assembly of the representatives of the people, but by the Council of Ministers.

Still, as a correspondent of the Jewish Daily News has it, the foremost representatives of the anti-Semitic parties in the Seim also expressed entire satisfaction with the result of the negotiations. The United Anti-Semitic Party in the Polish Seim consists of the Christian National Party, the Christian Democratic Party and the National Democratic Party, all of whom have an anti-Semitic plank in their platforms. The presidents of the first two parties declared openly their satisfaction with the agreement, if not from the humanitarian, at least from the practical and economic point of view. As one of them put it: "It is impossible to fight constantly a people with whom you are forced to live under the same roof." Minister Grabsky, who is intimately associated with the third named party, was the chief figure in these negotiations and he displayed a deep interest, almost an enthusiasm for the successful conclusion of the pariey. Minister Skrzynsky, who is at present in this country, trying to raise a loan of fifteen million dollars for Poland here, speaks in quite a practical way of the result of the agreement, seeing in it a boon for the Polish Government as well as for the Jewish people.

There are, however, a number of Jews in Poland who express themselves as dissatisfied with the agreement. The main opposition comes from the left wing; those who accuse the Jewish representatives of seeking to obtain concessions for the orthodox and the Zionists. These malcontents, led by Prilutzky and others, complain that the economic and social and cultural needs of the Jewish people were entirely neglected. It is, however, acceded by the bulk of Polish Jewry that the present agreement spells a new era for the Jews in Poland, promising more kindly and more friendly relation with the government as well as with the Polish people. As the Prime Minister declared at the time when the agreement was formally ratified: "I assure you that the government is looking forward to the crystallization of the policy of the Jewish parties in the spirit of the interests of the republic and of the internal consolidation of the state, as well as the financial and the economic upbuilding of the country. The government, for its part, will devote more attention to the cultural and economic requirements of the Jewish population."

With adherents of the Yiddish language admitting its decline in this country, it is now possible to remark, without being accused of blasphemy, that there is no future for it here. Children who understand Yiddish and can answer in it, use English as their language of communication. Even grown-ups, foreign-born, often speak English when they could speak Yiddish with greater fluency. No matter how much lovers of Yiddish would like to believe that it will always be spoken in America, many leading ones are frankly admitting that its doom seems assured.

Vladimir Jabotinsky once said that the fate of Yiddish in America is being determined by the children. The fact that even in the ghetto of New York Jewish children, born in America, do not speak Yiddish when at play with each other, is to him the measure for judging the permanency of the language. Abraham Cahan, editor of the "Jewish Forward," and for more than forty years a leading Yiddish journalist of the country, said in a recent interview that he would teach children Hebrew rather than Yiddish. If an objective of Jewish education is an understanding of Judaism, it is better reached through Hebrew, but far more important than the language of instruction is the subject matter itself, he adds.

How Yiddish, as the mother-tongue, is given up by the parents before the matter of children speaking Yiddish is considered, was brought out in a series of articles by H. Lang, also of the "Forward," showing the decline of Yiddish as the language of the Jewish masses. One reason for this, he said, was the rapid change from Jewish workers to Jewish business people and employers. In the American atmosphere workers do not want to remain proletarians and, as they better their economic condition and enter business life, they must adopt the language of the country. Change of occupation, Americanization and activity in the general business world shunts Yiddish to one side and its permanency is threatened through lack of an important role in the actual daily life of the people.

For the Jewish labouring people to seek to perpetuate Yiddish by insisting that it be the language of instruction in the Jewish school, is to support a movement, which, as Cahan says, is of as much avail as compresses for cancer. Of the various forces with which Yiddish has had to contend for survival within the past few years, limited immigration will be the one to place the final seal upon its doom. The best the Yiddishists can hope is that their language will continue to be read. As a spoken language in America it will live only as long as the very old people speak it. This is a great pity, as it is always a pity when a door is closed upon the world.

In Roumania it is nothing new for an entire Jewish community to be plundered and beaten and its homes turned into ruins. The government now differentiates between pogroms and "mere excesses," a pogrom being such only when Jews are killed. Literature inciting the populace to anti-Semitic attacks is freely distributed and there are so many mere excesses that Prince Bibesco in Washington must express more affection for the Jews than it is possible to expect from any one person. Prime Minister Bratianu nurses along the anti-Semitic movement in Roumania by stating that he is opposed to anti-Semitic outbreaks, but not to anti-Semitism as a movement. With a stream of Jewish blood soaking the soil, Queen Marie writes syndicated articles for the American press telling what a little queen she is and how women may be as stylish as she and in good taste as well.

But the king has more than once expressed his high opinion of Roumanian Jewry, or so members of the Roumanian Bnai Brith were told, at the opening of the first lodge in Transylvania recently, by Dr. Filderman, president of the Union of Roumanian Jews. He also went on to say that "for the king to keep guard over Jewish rights is not sufficient." The records do not say that sardonic laughter greeted the speech. Lodge festivities are usually attended by people who drink in every word a speaker says as something new, original and wise. So when Dr. Filderman said that the Jews must shift for themselves if they are to attack anti-Semitism in the schools, administration, in the army and among the people, his hearers probably nodded their heads sagely and in solemn satisfaction.

Perhaps the belated declaration that they are without official assistance is some advance for the Roumanian Jews, even though they are unable to help themselves very much. At least they know that there is no use to them of a king who's in the counting house counting out his money and a queen who's in the parlour eating bread and honey. They should keep this fact before the world by hook or crook.

Jewish Theatre Emerges, Modernized and Brainy, from Its Vale of Tears

It is More Racial than Ever, Intellectually, and Stronger

By DR. S. M. MELAMED

The mind of the Ghetto is dual, self-contradictory. It adapts itself quickly to new surroundings, and yet it always retains its identity. It is flexible, and yet it is the mind of a stubborn people, hewn from rock. It is both monotonous and a symphony of tunes. It is the elegy with overtones of jazz. It is a product of tragic experiences carried by boundless optimism.

What the Jews mean to the American stage need not be discussed here. The facts are well known. David Warfield is a Jew, so is George White. Belasco is a Jew, and so is Charlie Chaplin. . . . In the Ghetto, here and abroad, the theatre is the most powerful artery in the life of the dwellers. Even before the modern theatre was introduced into the Ghetto, there was plenty of acting and playing in it. The old-fashioned wanderer, called Maggid, was not only a sermonizer but also an actor. He told his audiences fairy tales and legends from the Talmud. In addition he gesticulated, acted, played and sang, and his audience was more captivated by his mimicry than by his moral deductions and legends. As soon as the modern theatre was introduced into the Ghetto it replaced the synagogue and the temple. Every Ghetto-dweller without exception is a theatre-goer, but only one in ten, or one in twenty attends religious services on Saturday, the religious day of rest.

Seek Refuge in Illusions

The Ghetto Jew flocks to the theatre neither for amusement nor for spiritual edification, but to find refuge in a world of illusion after a busy day of prosaic work and hard struggle. What place the theatre holds in the life of the Ghetto can be seen from the following facts. There are five times as many Germans in America as there are Jews, but there is actually no German theatre in America any more. However, there are twelve Jewish theatres in New York alone, and six or seven in the country.

Upon arriving in this country from Eastern Europe the immigrants brought along fragments of the Yiddish theatre, a few talented actors, a few able playwrights and a burning passion for the theatre. But the will to play and the talent to act do not constitute a theatre. There still remain problems of scenery, production, organization of the ensemble, finance, etc.

It took the Yiddish theatre more than twenty years to consolidate its position and become the power in the life of the Ghetto that it is to-day. The Yiddish theatre in America is not only a centre of art and literature, but also the greatest centre of Jewish philanthropic activity. Hundreds of Jewish charitable, social and fraternal organizations in New York are dependent upon the Yiddish theatre for their existence. Four performances a week in the Yiddish theatre are benefit performances, the proceeds of which go to the treasuries of the societies that buy these events at a fixed price, five or six hundred dollars. These benefit performances, in turn, are partly the financial basis of the Yiddish theatre.

During the years of consolidation and organization, its representatives had little time or opportunity to look after artistic standards. In addition, the whims and caprices of the dominating stars were the measure of all things. These stars, while very talented, were men without a developed taste, or a literary and aesthetic education. Therefore during these formative and troubled years, the Yiddish theatre had neither a standard nor a programme. One could not say that it was dedicated to this or that art, or school of art. Its main concern was to keep going.

Sharp Technique the Aim Now

The first generation of immigrants was under the spell of the pogroms of the beginning of the eighties and was rather inclined towards the melodramatic, sentimental and emotional. The first generation of Yiddish actors had the same trend of mind, and for many years the Yiddish theatre in America was actually a vale of tears. Every other play was an attempt to describe Jewish suffering in Russia, the agony of Jewish persecution, and so forth. Actor, playwright and audiences agreed upon this programme, and the acting was commensurate with the theme of the plays—always fortissimo.

The man who modernized and Americanized the Yiddish theatre, placing it on a sound basis from the point of view of technique and artistry, is Maurice Schwartz, the founder of the Yiddish Art Theatre. Maurice Schwartz is not only a powerful tragedian and a versatile artist but also a producer of genius and an able organizer. He first conceived and organized the ensemble in the Yiddish theatre. He is the first Yiddish actor in America to create a school of histrionic art. With the elimination of Joseph P. Adler, the Adler Theatre disappeared. With the elimination of Thomashefsky, the Thomashefsky Theatre has disappeared. With the passing of Joseph Kessler the Kessler Theatre disappeared.

Instead of Adler, Moguelsko, Thomashefsky and Kessler, there are to-day men like Maurice Schwartz, Ben-Ami, Ludwig Satz, a comedian by the grace of God, and a host of minor stars, able and well trained artists not only interested in deriving a personal benefit from their work, but also seriously concerned with the fate and future of the Yiddish theatre, to the development of which they have dedicated all their talent and energy. Many of them, like Ben-Ami for instance, are known on Broadway. What best characterizes the work and the art of this younger generation of stars is a moderate naturalism and a predilection for a sharp technique. In all respects they are American actors, saving for the accident of reciting their lines in Yiddish instead of English.

The theatre in the Ghetto of to-day is completely Americanized and modernized. The mimicry in the Yiddish theatre differs very little from the mimicry in the American theatre. The Yiddish actor no longer attempts to create a climax of tragic situation by an abundance of gesticulation and ranting, but by the production of a convincing conflict. Nor is he indifferent to scenery and all that goes to make the performance vivid and impressive. Nevertheless, the Yiddish theatre in America, while completely Americanized so far as technique and methods are concerned, is more Jewish than ever, and is more permeated with the consciousness of Jewish literature and Jewish art than before.

The Yiddish theatre in America is more American than ever, but also more Jewish than ever. Its development is characteristic of the peculiar faculties of the Ghetto mind, which adapts itself to new conditions and still retains its identity.

The wedding was solemnized Tuesday, August 4, of Jennie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. Pullan, 285 Russell Hill Road, and Harry Rosenthal, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Rosenthal. The ceremony was conducted by Rabbi J. Gordon, assisted by Rabbi M. Mandelbaum, of Utica, and Rev. L. Barkin. The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a French gown trimmed with pearls and French mirrors. The pearl-trimmed court train was fastened from the shoulders. The veil was of silver and pearls caught on each side with orange blossoms. The bride carried a shower bouquet of roses and orchids. Miss Anna Brown, of Youngstown, Ohio, maid of honour, was gowned in pink, with hat to match, and carried a bouquet of American Beauty roses. The groom was supported by I. Goldstick. The ringbearer, Donna Brown, of Youngstown, cousin to the groom, was dressed in white net over pink silk. The two flower girls, Sybil and Elinor Pullan, the bride's nieces, wore nile green georgette over pink taffeta and carried nile green baskets with sweet peas. They wore bands of tulle fastened on the side with rosettes. Supper was served to one hundred on tables set under a canopy on the lawn. In the evening Mrs. E. Pullan received 200 guests in the drawing room, attired in a French beaded gown of taupe, with a bouquet of American Beauty roses. Mrs. Wm. Rosenthal, who received with her, wore a French gown of white georgette trimmed with pearls. Among the out-of-town guests were: Mrs. I. Brown, grandmother of the groom, in a black beaded gown; Mrs. Toba Sachs, of Ottawa, in black beaded georgette; Mrs. Marcus, of Boston, in black satin; Mrs. S. Brownstein, of Montreal, in pink beaded georgette; I. The groom's gift to the bride was a diamond and platinum wrist watch, and the gift to the maid of honour was a diamond bar pin, and to the ringbearer and flower-bearers silver mesh bags. The happy couple left for their honeymoon to Muskoka, the bride wearing a French tan ensemble suit, with hat, shoes and stockings to match.

"GUARDIAN FUND" OF THE ORT

Mr. Meyer Bloomfield, chairman of the Guardian Fund of the Ort, announced to-day the acceptance of Mr. Adolph Held as member on the Advisory Board of the Fund. Mr. Held's extensive experience overseas as director of the Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society peculiarly equips him to render important service in the work of the "Guardian Fund." In the course of his activities in Europe he came in close contact with the leaders in Jewish communal work throughout these countries and became particularly intimate with the psychological setting of Eastern European Jewry.

The closing of the doors in America to immigration from these countries emphasizes the necessity of preparing the Jewish children there to support themselves by productive labour in the countries in which they now find themselves. It is the realization of this necessity that prompted Mr. Held to pledge his full-hearted support to the "Guardian Plan," both in connection with formulating the actual policies covering the trade training of children as well as with matters of control and financial administration. Mr. Held is president of the Forward Association and vice-president and director of the Amalgamated Bank of New York.

DENIES PRESIDENT OF LADIES' GARMENT WORKERS WILL RESIGN

The demand for the resignation of Morris Sigman, president of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, made on Monday night at a meeting of 4,000 shop chairmen and committeemen of Locals 2, 9 and 22, was characterized last Tuesday as absurd by Joseph Fish, secretary-treasurer of the New York Joint Board of the union and spokesman for President Sigman.

"We don't listen to the other side. Mr. Sigman does not consider the suggestions and demands made by the Left wing," said Fish.

Asked whether the pressure which forced the recent resignation of Israel Feinberg and Meyer Perlstein, vice-presidents of the Union, from offices of the Joint Board and manager of the association department would have any effect upon the position of President Sigman, Mr. Fish said that that seemed highly improbable as the pressure on Feinberg and Perlstein came from the Right wing.

COMMISSION SAILS TO CONFER WITH ZIONIST FINANCIAL AGENCIES ABROAD

A commission, consisting of officers of the Palestine Securities, Inc., sailed for Europe Wednesday on the "Berengaria" to confer with Zionist financial agencies abroad in connection with the effort undertaken by the Palestine Securities, Inc., to finance the erection of one thousand houses in Palestine to relieve the acute housing shortage in Palestine due to the greatly increased immigration of the past year.

Officers of Palestine Securities, Inc., included on the commission are: Bernard A. Rosenblatt, president; Emanuel Neumann, vice-president, and S. J. Weinstein, treasurer. Palestine Securities, Inc., organized this spring and sponsored by the Zionist Organization of America and the American Zion Commonwealth, is financing home construction in Palestine by the sale of first mortgage bonds.

A report issued by the organization upon the departure of its commission states that individual advance subscriptions, secured chiefly in New York, total $400,000. In addition, definite arrangements have been made with committee of responsible business men in eight cities throughout the country for the sale of bonds this fall which will bring in a total of almost $500,000 more. The board of directors is assisted in its work by an advisory council consisting of well-known business men and bankers in all parts of the country.

Although most of the subscriptions have been obtained on a partial-payment plan, the commission is in position to place $150,000 at the disposal of the proper authorities and thus begin at once the work of relieving the acute suffering caused by the critical housing shortage.

An achievement hailed as an event of the utmost importance for the promotion of the economic development of Palestine is the announcement that several important banks in New York and other cities have agreed to accept the mortgage bonds as collateral security for loans to the extent of 80 per cent. of their par value. This was brought about through the initiative of Mr. Weinstein, treasurer, and, it is pointed out, will greatly facilitate the investment of American capital in Palestine on a scale hitherto unknown.

The members of the commission, while abroad, will confer with the officers of the Jewish Colonial Trust, the Anglo-Palestine Company and the General Mortgage Bank of Palestine. Following their conferences in Europe and the sessions of the World Zionist Congress in Vienna, the members of the commission will visit Palestine to investigate further activities with regard to financing the erection of homes in the Jewish Homeland by the sale of first mortgage bonds.

Shortly before their departure Judge Rosenblatt and Mr. Neumann paid flying visits, in the interests of the Palestine Securities, to Boston, Providence, New Haven, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Detroit, Cleveland, Milwaukee, Minneapolis and St. Paul, where they reported an intense interest on the part of local groups to co-operate in the work.

During the absence of the members of the commission the business of the Palestine Securities will continue under the supervision of Harry Kottler and I. D. Morrison, vice-presidents, and Israel Matz, chairman of the finance committee.

Editor,
CANADIAN JEWISH REVIEW.

As a Jewish veteran of the South African War and of the Great War I believe that there are from 300 to 400 Jewish veterans at present in Toronto. I should very much like to see one of our new rabbis take this matter up and form a Jewish soldiers' organization. There is no doubt it would be a great benefit for our Jewish people at large in Toronto.

American Jewry Combining to Raise $15,000,000 for Foreign Reconstruction and Russian Colonization—to Meet Next Month

Philadelphia, Pa.—This city will be the scene of a nation-wide conference of Jews from every part of the country and representing every element in American Israel on Saturday evening, September 12, and all of the following day to consider plans for the continuance of relief of their co-religionists in Europe and Palestine with special reference to a project for settling 100,000 Jews as farmers in Russia by the end of 1927. Fifteen million dollars is the amount which, it is estimated, will be necessary to carry out the plans that will be submitted to the conference.

The call for the conference has been issued by David A. Brown, president of the General Necessities Corporation, and is signed by over 200 leading Jews from all parts of the United States. It describes the dates of the conference as important days in the history of American Jewry. The signatories to the conference includes many who are prominent in orthodox and reform Jewry. Zionists and Jewish labour organizations, and nearly 5,000 individual invitations have been sent out for the conference.

The sessions which will be held at the Benjamin Franklin Hotel are to be under the auspices of The American Jewish Joint Distribution Committee, the American Jewish Relief Committee, the Central Relief Committee and the People's Relief Committee. The last-named three organizations jointly raised upward of $65,000,000 in this country in a series of campaigns beginning in 1917 and ending in 1923 for the relief of their war-stricken brethren in Europe and in Palestine. The first-named organization, of which Felix M. Warburg, of Kuhn, Loeb and Company, New York bankers, is chairman, acted as the distributing agency for this huge fund and until last year had its organization ramified in Russia, Poland, Austria, Czecho-Slovakia, and other European lands where it dispensed relief to thousands of destitute men, women and children, subventioned orphan asylums, established and maintained trade-schools and carried on a series of medical and sanitary enterprises.

Over a year ago reports from its European representatives were to the effect that Jewish economic conditions everywhere in Russia had been sufficiently stabilized to make possible the withdrawal of outside assistance. The Joint Distribution Committee began at once to withdraw from Europe and to liquidate its affairs. The three money-raising organizations also began to bring their existence to an end.

The only exception to the general withdrawal from Europe was in the case of Russia. Dr. Joseph Rosen, a noted American agricultural scientist, famed throughout the world as the discoverer of "Rosen Rye" and as the man whose plans resulted in the breaking up of the famine four years ago in the Volga region, was in charge of the Joint Distribution Committee's reconstruction work in that country. He came to America and persuaded the Joint Distribution Committee to allot $400,000 for the purpose of settling Jews on land assigned for colonization purposes by the government. He stated that there were several thousand Jews who wished to leave the towns and cities to become farmers and he urged that they be aided.

His request was granted and he returned to Russia to set up what he expected would be a modest enterprise. But, with the economic pressure exerted upon the middle class, the merchants and traders, by the Russian Government, hundreds and then thousands of Jews joined in what has become a movement "back to the soil," which, according to many observers, is the greatest in all Jewish history.

Reports that come from Russia of a new exodus, a mighty hegira involving tens of thousands of men, women and children which was filling up tens of thousands of acres of choice farm lands in the Ukraine, in Crimea, in White Russia, were so amazing that the committee asked Mr. David A. Brown to make an independent investigation. Toward the end of last May, after a tour of the new Russian Jewish colonies, lasting over a month and covering tens of thousands of miles, Mr. Brown cabled to the Joint Distribution Committee that over 4,000 families, approximately 20,000 individuals, had already been settled on the soil, with over 400,000 acres already under cultivation, which would be increased to 600,000 by this fall.

Mr. Brown declared in his cable that if funds could be made available promptly 25,000 Jewish families, approximately 125,000 individuals, could be settled as farmers by the end of 1927. Applications, he said, were pouring into Dr. Rosen's office in Moscow from thousands who were eager to settle on the soil, and an opportunity presented itself to effect what would be tantamount to the complete psychological and economic transformation of three million Jews of Russia. Mr. Brown's cable was confirmed by another from Dr. Bernard Kahn, European director of the Joint Distribution Committee, who followed him into Russia, covering the same territory. Dr. Kahn's report was even more enthusiastic. He spoke of the Jewish "back-to-the-soil" movement as unparalleled in Jewish history.

On the basis of these reports, which were amplified by Mr. Brown on his return on June 1 to America, the Joint Distribution Committee abandoned its liquidation plan, and authorized Mr. Brown to convene the Philadelphia conference, at which a campaign to raise $15,000,000 will be proposed. While a very large part of the contemplated fund will be utilized for the Russian-Jewish agricultural colonization, a considerable proportion will go for welfare and reconstructive work of various kinds in other parts of Europe and in Palestine.

Included among the signatories to the invitation are Felix M. Warburg, chairman of the Joint Distribution Committee; Louis Marshall, chairman of the American Jewish Relief Committee; Leon Kamaiky, chairman of the Central Relief Committee; Alexander Kahn, chairman of the People's Relief Committee, and the following:
